DRUNKEN DISTURBER

Arrested Monday Morning While Trying to Start Campfire in Downtown Building.

Sunday morning about 2:30 o'clock, Officers W. D. Fizer and D. P. Bloomhuff arrested Charles Clancey on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. Clancey when arrested was attempting to build a fire in the vestibule of the Caproni building. When taken to the county jail he was searched by Jailer John W. Eitel and several bills of small denominations and a spool of gilt wrapping twine and half of a $2 bill were found on his person. Sunday morning the police were notified that the front door of the residence of Mrs. Jack Newell had been broken during the night. Officer Tolle investigated and discovered several burned matches, some money and half of a $2 bill covered with blood. In the course of the day he learned of the torn $2 bill discovered on the person of Clancey and when he compared the fragments they were found to be of the same bill. Clancey was then examined but claimed because of being drunk he did not remember anything.

The police entertain the theory that some of the local characters attempted to rob Clancey in the doorway of the Newell residence, and that in his attempt to prevent them Clancey broke the door and in hunting for his handkerchief to stop the flow of blood caused by being cut by the glass, he dropped a part of the bill. Clancey will be held on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. It was also learned that the gilt twine that was found on the person of Clancey was taken from the store of M. A. Swift, and for this Clancey may also have to face the charge of petit larceny.

RED CROSS

Secretary Receives a Varied Assortment of Appeals Every Day.

One mail on the desk of the secretary of the National Tuberculosis Association brought in the other day a varied assortment of appeals for help from the Red Cross Christmas seal fund. Here they are:

One mother writes relative a little son with tuberculosis of the spine. She does not want to see him become a hunchback. One writes for help for her daughter. She is without money, but she will work to support her daughter. One wife writes that she is making a fight to get well. She has a family of three children, and she is afraid that her husband is also infected. The future does not look bright for her. She is afraid that her three children will in a short time be orphans. A school teacher writes that in her room last year was a very bright and promising pupil, a young girl 16 years of age. She missed her this year and after a short time started an investigation to learn why she was not with the class. She was soon found. She was confined to her bed with consumption. She and her mother lived together in a shanty and her mother was taking in washings.

Not all of these and hundreds of similar appeals can be headed, because there is not enough money. Will you buy Red Cross seals to make the burden lighter for some poor sufferer?

HEMP IS HEMP SURE.

Paris dealers are paying $10 per hundred pounds, straight, for hemp, which is said to be the highest price on record in this section of the state.

Hemp was formerly a leading crop in the Bluegrass section, but in recent years it has been supplanted to a large degree by tobacco, consequently the yield of hemp is very small, and this accounts for the higher prices. Indications are, however, that a greatly reduced acreage of hemp will be planted next year.

"CHAMPION STORKER."

Dr. George N. Waldeck, of Huntington, has received the title of being the "champion storker" in that neck of the woods. According to his statistical report filed, he has officiated at eighty births so far this year.

The December term of the Robertson Circuit Court convened Monday, with Circuit Judge L. P. Fryer presiding, and Commonwealth Attorney J. C. Dedman looking after the interests of the Commonwealth. Mr. Albert Stroud, of Tolleboro, was in Maysville Saturday on business.

Mr. J. D. Drago, of Ripley, was in this city Saturday.

RESTAURANT RAIDED

Police Swoop Down On Front Street Establishment—Much Wet Goods Found.

Sunday about noon Chief of Police James Mackey and Officer William Tolle raided the restaurant of John Devin, on Front street, several doors from Market street, and confiscated several dozen bottles of liquor. The police learned from a farmer that whisky could be purchased from one Alfred Tomlin, of Aberdeen. Upon investigation it was found that Devin was the source from which Tomlin obtained his liquor, and it was decided to raid the restaurant operated by Devin. This was done and a considerable amount of evidence was found by the officials.

Devin and Tomlin were placed under arrest and released on bond. They are charged with selling liquor without a license.

ISSUED COLD CHECKS.

MORE TROUBLE FOR BUSINESS.

Shippers throughout the country are once more stirred up, this time by an order recently issued by Secretary McAdoo, which requires exporters to declare the contents of every package, all marks, the nature of the vessel in which it is to be shipped, the motive power of the vessel—steam, gasoline or wind. The new order is to go into effect January 1, next. Three shipping companies, members of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, are protesting in regard to the order as it affects the use of giving the current statistics that it already has on file. "Nearly all of them," said the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, "must be filed with the customs house in New York. The government is asking for a lot of confidential information that afterwards will be made public. Our foreign competitors will obtain data to which they are not entitled. A railroad official declared that 'it will delay cars' it is ordered that all of those details be attached to the bills of lading and we are short enough of cars now." "It will involve a lot of labor and a greatly increased clerical force," was the objection of a large exporter. Mr. Newton side-stepped the situation by declaring he knew nothing about the order. It was something for which the Department of Commerce had asked. It looks as if Secretary Redfield had hit upon a new way of working business, but was hiding behind Secretary McAdoo in putting it into operation.

If Andy Carnegie is pining to get rid of that $107,000,000 in order to die poor all he has to do is to trot right along to this little burg. We receive him with open pockets and carry a about tainted money.

A look of Napoleon's hair recently sold for $107.00. The business men of the country would give more for that for the present possession of Secretary McAdoo's scalp.

"Local issues were involved." Thus airily some Democrats seek to dismiss the elections of this year—forgetting that when local issues show a nation wide drift to one party there is a deeper meaning in the returns.

"It is observable that a favorite theme for the interested witnesses testifying by means of interviews of the Republican cause seems to be 'hard times.'" declares former Governor of Ohio. Representative Ansherry, Democrat from Ohio. It is also observable that every failure chargeable to the Democratic party has been laid to the European war, and that the spotted prosperity which has come to the country has been credited by the Democrats, not to the European war, but to the present administration. It is further observable that the Honorable Ansherry was succeeded by a Republican, Nelson E. Matthews, from the Fifth Ohio District. Evidently Mr. Ansherry's observation is done with one eye.

The New York Sun speaks of "the curious circumstances surrounding" Congressman Fitzgerald's defeat for a judgeship in New York. We wonder what those circumstances were. It is possible that they originated in the White House where Mr. Fitzgerald's independence has been classed as insubordination and has led him to be placed "on the left" as the President now terms it?

When you step on the other fellow's toe" he ought to have sense enough to keep out of the way." But if he steps on yours he's a clumsy brute.

Keep on doing your Christmas shopping early and you will have time to do it again.

Fun--Well Done

Not For Him.

Softly the nurse smoothed the sufferer's pillow. He had only been admitted that morning, and now he looked pleadingly up at the "ministering angel" who stood at his bedside.

"An' pliwat did yez say the doctor's name was, nurse, dear?" he asked.

"Dr. Kilpatrick," was the reply. "He's the senior house surgeon."

The sufferer winced and pulled a wry face.

"That settles it," he muttered, firmly. "That doctor won't get no chance to operate on me."

"Why not?" asked the nurse in surprise. "He's a very clever man."

"That's as may be," the patient said again, his voice cold and strong. "But me name happens to be Patrick."

Dishonest Advertising

The Federal Trade Commission has taken up the matter of dishonest advertising on representation of the Associated Advertising Clubs. President H. S. Houston, of the club, argued before the commission a few days ago, that such advertising is unfair competition, and hence comes under the commission's jurisdiction.

Merchants used to argue that the public discredited their statements and they had to paint the thing in high colors to attract attention. This style of advertising is getting obsolete.

Modern advertising authorities urge plain statements of fact and figures, with the effort to give an impression of frank sincerity.

Wild cat mining stocks, and business enterprises, impossible cures for disease, there is still a lot of that sort of thing that hurts the whole advertising business. Local journals depending on their home constituents use but little of this stuff. They are too close to the public, and would be affected too quickly by the losses of people defrauded by these deceptions. It would be a boon to the legitimate newspaper business if all these fakes could be cleaned out.

Caught a Gray Fox

(Licking Valley Courier.)

The hounds belonging to Chess Dyer, the champion fox hunter of West Liberty, caught a fine large gray fox just above town Saturday night. Chess did not intend to kill the fox, but it persisted in staying in front of the hounds until they picked it up.

Successful Exhibitor

(Danville Messenger.)

Miss Lily Noel, of this city, sent a set of fancy work to the State Fair in Beaumont, Tex., last week and was given fifteen ribbons thereon. Almost every article sent took either a first or second ribbon. She was very successful at the Kentucky fairs during the summer, and won in almost every offer for fancy work at the State Fair.

Wild Geese Wintering

(Elizabethtown News.)

A most novel and unusual sight is to be witnessed every day near Smith's mill on Valley Creek, where at least fifty-six wild geese have taken up their winter habitation in the center of a fifty-acre wheat field. They seem to be perfectly satisfied with their sentiments to warn them of the approaching hunters. A number of futile attempts have been made to get close enough to them for a shot. The geese fly off when they are approached, but when the land is clear return to their wheat field.

HOW TO DOSE ANIMALS.

After thrusting a struggling porker into a barrel and pouring his medicine on and not into him, the amateur veterinarian will do well to heed the following suggestion for giving medicine to animals which is printed in Farm and Fireside:

"When fluid medicine is to be given to sheep, cattle, horses, or swine, a practical and simple form of drenching tube can be made by taking a piece of rubber tubing one-half inch in diameter and about three or four feet long. Affix a tin funnel to one end of the tube and a piece of iron or brass tubing four to six inches long at the other end.

"When drenching, insert the metal tube into the animal's mouth back as far as the metal tube will reach, then elevate the funnel end and allow the drenching medicine to pass slowly into the animal's mouth. Care should be taken not to raise the animal's head too high—just enough to allow the medicine to gradually flow back to the back part of the mouth.

"The medicine can be checked, if flowing too fast, by pinching the rubber tube.

"In most cases it is better to drench the animal while standing, and in the case of sheep, if the medicine is given in a standing position, the gasoline remedy or similar worm remedies will pass directly to the fourth stomach, whereas if the medicine is given when the sheep is placed on its haunches or in a sitting position the medicine has been found to be less effective."

TWO BLACK BAGS

By LOUISE OLIVER.

The porter disappeared somewhere with the bags as the train roared into the shed, and Lorimer Bancroft stopped to say a few words to a fellow passenger whose acquaintance he had made. The newly-arrived train was deserted, porters and all, when the two men looked around for their belongings, except for a girl, who stood alone beside the car ahead.

"I suppose the man has taken my things to the baggage room," said Lorimer. And the two men strolled up the platform, continuing their talk.

They came to the girl and passed her. Then Lorimer, who never failed to champion beauty in distress, scented an adventure and stopped.

"That young lady seems to be looking for someone to carry her grip. The porters are nowhere around, so I think I'll go back. If you don't mind, and see if I can help."

The girl saw Lorimer return, but just as he reached her she started up the platform. Lorimer began to say something dreadful under his breath, when his sense of humor triumphed and he stooped for the bags. "Shy!" he chuckled. "Afraid the chap in the plaid coat was going to flirt with her. Well, we will just pick up her things and tote 'em along, anyway."

The girl had a start of ten yards or so, but Lorimer, with long, easy strides, soon covered the distance. Then he kept respectfully at her heels until she reached the station gates. She started for the checkroom, then changed her mind and made for the street.

The bags which had originally weighed twenty pounds apiece, now weighed fifty, and by the time she had reached a taxicab stand they weighed eighty.

Lorimer's sense of humor no longer helped to assuage the aching of his muscles. He set the bags on the ground and rubbed his cramped biceps. The girl was rummaging through her purse. "Looking for an address?" thought Lorimer. She evidently failed to find what she sought, for she replaced the mixture of papers and toilet accessories, and continued on down the street.

"Help! Where is she going now?" Lorimer's jaw dropped in amazement. The girl was walking faster than before and he was likely to find the trail more difficult in the crowded streets.

"Trot along, fido!" he commanded himself, blowing on his hands and peking up the bags. "Just follow the missus! She's lost the address and we don't know where we are going."

Lorimer went to Lorimer after the girl. He had shut his teeth hard. His arms were pulling out of the sockets. Great drops of sweat were rolling down his face.

The girl was entering an office building when Lorimer determined to end the misery. "Here's where the trail ends for fido!"

Setting the bags upon the mosaic floor he approached the girl as she waited for an ascending elevator.

"I beg your pardon," said he lifting his hat. "I think I shall have to turn your baggage over to an attendant here, to manage for you. I—I have a very pressing business engagement, and really must go." He took out his watch to emphasize his words.

The pretty girl looked at the bags in astonishment.

"Why, they are not mine!"

"Not yours?" Then whose under the canopy are they?" asked Lorimer, and as he spoke his eyes made a rapid survey of the offenders. They were suspiciously familiar!

The girl started to laugh, then stopped suddenly. Her face worked convulsively for a minute as she struggled to hide her amusement.

"But why didn't you ask me?"

"They seemed to be yours. You were standing guard over them."

"I knew they were not mine, and I thought that as someone had made a mistake and carried mine on ahead, I had better stay beside the stray ones. Father always says, in case of a mistake, to hold the wrong ones. It will eventually lead to the whereabouts of one's own belongings. When I saw you come for your bags I decided it was useless to remain there, and I intended to look for mine in the baggage room. But as I was tired and hungry, I decided to send Bob, my brother, to do the investigating for me. I couldn't imagine why you were following me! I was going to take a taxi home, but I found I hadn't enough money. I'm going to dad's office for more now."

His bags! The weight alone should have been enough to identify them. One was packed full of law records, the other contained some fittings for his car. He had been bringing them along to save time.

He looked around for a knothole, and not seeing such a fortunate means of escape, picked up his bags and departed.

A week later Bob Forsythe called him up on the phone.

"Dorothy wants you to come to dinner tonight, old fellow. Can you make it?"

Lorimer accepted, wondering in the meantime how he had met Dorothy.

But he was to learn that she was the girl of the train, and she hadn't told a soul!

FLEMINGSBURG GROWING.

City Assessor Sld J. Collins reports the population of this city as 1,423. This does not include quite a number who live here and claim their home elsewhere in order to escape city and school taxes. It is safe to say there are enough of this class to run the total up to 1,500. This, with the suburbs, which are properly a part of the city, will make our actual population 2,000.—Flemingsburg Times-Democrat.

A SUFFRAGE PAGEANTIST

Miss Hazel Mackaye has adopted the rather unusual vocation of pageant writer. She is probably the only woman pageantist and has achieved much success in her peculiar work. She wrote and produced the suffrage allegory which was staged on the treasury steps in Washington in 1913, the suffrage pageant in New York in 1914, and the pageant of Athens recently produced at Vassar college. She is a sister of Percy Mackaye, the dramatist. The picture shows her with her dog "Mut."

GIRL TAMES HORSES

Buy's Ill-Tempered Animals and Then Cures Them.

Kindness is Her Rule, but She Can Give Lesson When Necessary—Has Her Own Training Field.

Philadelphia.—In a field near Swarthmore college a girl who believed to be the only woman horsebreaker in the world goes quietly about her daily business of taming the temper out of half wild equines. No one is there to see, but it is a show that has all the exciting features of a broncho exhibition, with the added interest that the "buster" is a slender little woman.

Miss Betty Brown, the woman horsebreaker, says she took up the business because she knew little about anything but horses. For two years Miss Brown was a trainer for a New York firm.

Besides taking unbroken horses belonging to dealers and training them for saddle or harness, Miss Brown buys ill-tempered animals on her own account and by special treatment makes them fit for a child to ride.

"There is usually a reason for a horse being vicious," she said, "from her seat, cross-saddle on a splendid thoroughbred."

"Take the case of this mare. I bought her for a song better horse owner could do nothing with her. I traced her history and found she had been attached to a racing stable where a lot of half-grown boys used her for joy rides around the track. The consequence was that a good mare was almost hopelessly spoiled by a lot of foolish young fellows who would yank her out of the stable at all hours, and beat her and ride her with or without a saddle at the fastest gallop they could get out of her."

"Naturally the mare became possessed of the idea that all men were born enemies and every chance she got she tried to protect herself or get even with her tormentors. They replied in kind, and the last gleam of good-natured intelligence was soon beaten out of her."

"The fact is she is a splendid mare, and if I can but bring back her original sweetness of temper and undo the havoc done by that pack of boys I shall be able to sell her for $1,000 easily. If I cannot do this she will still be worth more than I gave for her. She is quite untrustworthy now, and it will be a long fight to bring her around, but I think I shall win."

"I depend upon kindness and firmness rather than the whip to achieve results. You see, I do not even wear spurs. A horse responds more readily to masterful kindness than to brutal ill treatment."

"But sometimes it is necessary to use drastic measures. The worst case I can remember was a horse that persistently threw himself. No sooner would I be in the saddle than this ill-mannered brute would up in the air and flop over."

"It takes skill and agility for a rider to avoid injury when a horse, without warning, throws himself on the ground. One has to disengage one's self without a second's delay or a nasty bump is likely to result."

"Well, I stood this horse's antics for a few times and then decided that a sharp lesson was needed. I threw him and threw him hard. This was repeated until he got it firmly into his head that throwing was a punishment and not a pastime. When he learned that, he was a good horse."

"It's interesting work. I vary it by teaching riding, but I like horsebreaking best. There is a certain amount of risk about it, but I have never been hurt. My natural quickness has saved me at critical times."

Steam Pleasure Boat on Small Michigan Lake Travelers' Record in Small Circle.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Major Watson, a steam pleasure boat operated on Reed's lake, near this city, has a distinction not possessed by any other boat. Although it has traveled more than 82,500 miles, it has never been more than a mile in a direct line, from the spot where it was built.

The boat has been in operation for 25 years. It makes trips around the lake, which has a circumference of more than three miles, running five months every year. This gives a total mileage of 82,500.

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE HAS GOOD BUILDINGS

FROM THE EDUCATOR'S NOTEBOOK

Boston.—"Competent observers are agreed that one of the reasons for Mexico's revolution is the lack of popular education," says Dr. Andrus Osuna, the new superintendent of schools of Mexico City, who has brought 150 school teachers to Boston and other American cities to observe the educational methods in practical use. "There is another Mexican revolution of which little is known. It is the bloodless battle for a new and better method of popular education. Constant revolutions have always been in the way of education in Mexico. During the Diaz administration, education was left to local initiative, and it was in a very few cities that proper attention was given to this important need. In fact the greater part of the states neglected their schools. The Constitutional government is contemplating the organization of a general office in the City of Mexico which may correspond to the Commissioner of Education in the United States, and a certain amount of money is to be distributed from the federal revenues for the betterment of public schools."

New York.—The official sanction of college presidents has been placed on the students' camps for military training. At a recent meeting held by Dr. John Orier Hibben, of Princeton, it was decided not only to endorse the student camps but to recommend them to their students. "We regard this movement as in no way militaristic," declared one of the college heads. "It's object is to train the students of our colleges and therefore serve a useful purpose to the country. The education which the students receive under officers of the army is of the greatest value to them and the nation, and we feel that the summer camps are agencies for good which the universities should do their utmost to encourage."

Cambridge, Mass.—The report from the state of Baroda, in India, that there are now 3,088 educational institutions there, including one arts college, four high schools and fifteen special institutions, recalls the fact that Baroda is the only state in India with a compulsory education law. It is also recalled here that the ruler, the Gaekwar of Baroda, sent his son to Harvard. The young "Gike," as he was called here, was one of the most popular men who ever came from out of the far East to Harvard. He took a deep interest in education, and went deeply into American methods. That his influence has been felt in the growth of education among his people is shown by the report from Baroda.

West Point.—In a recent address before the New York State Historical Society, at West Point, Commissioner of Education John H. Finley, expressed the opinion of many educators relative to military training in the schools. "I have objected to introducing military training into our public schools as a means of conscripting children and youth for a service which assumed the continuance of the very thing which we are trying to exterminate in our schools; but I have ardently advocated as serious discipline in our schools as we expect from those who are to serve their country as soldiers."

NO NEED FOR SCALLOPING

Many Other Ways by Which Centerpieces May Be Finished, With the Best of Results.

"I never know how to finish off a centerpiece unless I scallop it," says one woman, "and I hate scalloping!" Just stop and think a minute how many ways you can finish off one centerpiece and you can relegate scalloping to those who like the monotonous work. There is always a lace. By the way, remember when applying lace to a centerpiece that you can often pull a thread at the top of the lace and thus allow for your fullness when measuring the circumference of your piece. If you intend to add lace to a scalloped edge, you will find the larger scallops will "take" the lace better. Then you can buttonhole the straight edge of the centerpiece, making a small picot stitch once in a while, or crochet a similar edge to it. Binding with white or colored tape will suit centerpieces of a quaint old-fashioned kind. Fringe is another possibility, as are the many novelty cotton and linen braids which one can find in any art needlework department.

TRIMMINGS ARE MEAGER

As always with the French, the most elegant of designs are the simplest, and this is true of the fall millinery. The trimming is almost meager, but rarely beautiful, what there is of it. Beads, wooden threads, soutache braid, as well as chenille, silk and all kinds of metal threads, jet and gelatin beads are some of the materials from which the various trimmings are made.

DISCUSS MATTERS OF INTEREST

Will Get Together at the Agricultural College at Lexington on Tuesday, January 4th, to Discuss Various Matters of Interest Relating to the Production of Beef Cattle.

Lexington.—Breeders of beef cattle in Kentucky are making preparation for one of the most interesting meetings in the history of their association. They will get together at the Agricultural College, at Lexington, on Tuesday, January 4th, to discuss various matters of interest relating to the production of beef cattle. These men usually have some kind of guessing and judging contests with different grades of steers, the animals being killed and dressed in the presence of the company. Among the members of this association are many of Kentucky's foremost citizens, and they always expect and enjoy a good time at their association meetings.

CORN GROWERS ARE ACTIVE

Annual Convention Looked Forward To By Many.

The annual show and convention held by The Kentucky Corn Growers' Association has come to be an event looked forward to by all the leading farmers of the state. The show will be held this year during the week of January 4, and on the 6th will be held their annual meeting. The show has grown phenomenally from year to year, and this year a premium list appropriate to a show by far the largest in their history has been prepared. No Kentucky farmer can afford to miss this great event and the opportunity to get acquainted with the best farmers and stock men of the state. The show will be held as a part of Farmers' Week at the Agricultural College at Lexington.

FAMOUS FOR HER HORSES

Good Time and Lot of Information Is Promised.

Kentucky has always been famous for her horses, and it goes without saying that a good time and a lot of information is in store for all who attend the meeting of the Kentucky Horse Breeders' Association, to be held January 6th, at the Agricultural College, at Lexington, as a part of the Farmers' Week exercises.

The man who attends the horse breeders' or any other meetings will have the free privilege of attending any or all of the other meetings and see the various exhibits, all of which will constitute a rare treat.

POULTRY IS GREAT FACTOR

A man very much interested in chickens was heard the other day to express uneasiness for fear the crop reports might show the wheat crop of this year to be of greater value than the poultry crop. Few of us realize how great a factor is poultry in the success of the average farmer. The bulk of the poultry supply does not come from poultry farms, but from ordinary farms where poultry is regarded as a by-product.

Kentucky has every year one of the best poultry shows in the country. The show this year will be held the week of January 4th, at the Agricultural College, at Lexington. A very handsome premium list has been provided, and on January 5th the poultry raisers will get together for a big convention. A good time is promised to all who attend. All is free.

THE ANNUAL PORK CROP

If it were not for the cholera, it is hard to tell the value of the annual crop of pork that Kentucky would produce, this state being so admirably adapted to swine raising. As it is, Kentucky has many of the best herds of swine of the various breeds to be found anywhere in the country. The Kentucky Swine Breeders' Association, an old substantial organization, will hold its annual convention at the Agricultural College, at Lexington, on January 5th, 1916. Some live topics of interest to swine raisers will be opened for general discussion.

The Kentucky Dairy Cattle Club will hold its annual convention during "Farmers' Week" at the Agricultural College at Lexington on January 7th, 1916. All during the week there will be exhibits of the dairy products coming from the handsome prizes that are being offered. This club offers membership to any one interested.

SHEEP RAISING IN KENTUCKY

Kentucky is said to equal in natural adaptability for sheep raising and as a matter of fact she has not altogether neglected her opportunities, for many of the best flocks in the country are within her borders. The Sheep Breeders of Kentucky will get together in their annual convention on Friday, January 7th, during Farmers' Week at the Agricultural College at Lexington.

PRODUCTION OF ALFALFA

The production of alfalfa in Kentucky has probably more than doubled in the past two years and is increasing with acceleration. There are now 80 many of Kentucky's best farmers growing alfalfa and learning its value as a feed for all kinds of live stock that last January they got together and formed a state association of alfalfa growers. They will have their second meeting on January 4th, at the Agricultural College, at Lexington. They will discuss all kinds of questions regarding production, use and marketing of alfalfa.

MANAGING THE ACTORS.

Charles Frohman was a manager in every sense of the word. Not only was he a great organizer, but he possessed a wonderful talent for handling the players themselves and getting them to acquiesce in his suggestion, even when they were of the most extraordinary nature. And since his untimely death in the destruction of the Lusitania his actors have been unanimous in their praise of his methods. This winning talent did not come with experience, but was shown in the earliest stage of his business career. His brother Daniel, who, with Isaac P. Marcossion is writing a very entertaining biography of Charles, just beginning in the Cosmopolitan magazine, shows this very clearly by the following anecdote:

"The year was 1877, and Charles was 17 years old. His brother Gustave, who was manager of the Standard Comedy Company, was obliged to take up other duties for a while, and the advance agent—none other than the youthful Charles—had to take his place. This was his first experience in handling actors.

"He began at Champaign, Ill. The first test of his resource came at a one-night stand at Waupec, Ia., where 'Lemons' was billed as a feature. The prospects for a big house were good. Heard of railroad fare seemed assured, when just before supper time John F. Germon, one of the company, approached Charles in great perturbation.

"'We can't play tonight. Mrs. Post is sick.'"

"Mrs. Post played the part of the old woman in the play, and it was a very important role.

"Charles Frohman only smiled, as he always did in an emergency.

"Then he said to Germon: 'You're a member of the well known Germon family, aren't you? Then live up to your reputation and play the part yourself.'

"'But how about my mustache?' asked Germon.

"'I'll pay for having it shaved off,' replied Frohman.

"The net result was that Germon sacrificed his mustache, played the part acceptably without any one in the audience discovering that he was a man masquerading as an old woman. Charles put Wallace, who was acting as stage manager, in Germon's part. Thus the house was saved and the company was able to proceed."

A frivolous paragrapher remarks that Mr. Edison's concrete furniture will be hard to abstract.

RIVER NEWS

The Ohio is falling from Pittsburgh to Cairo.

The towboats Otto Marmet and Robert P. Gilham passed up with empties for Kanawha.

Several hundred coops of chickens and turkeys were part of the manifest of the steamer Reuben Dunbar into Pittsburgh Wednesday.

A fleet of Kanawha towboats, consisting of the Sallie Marmet, J. H. Ware and Dorothy Barrett, were windbound between Portsmouth and Cincinnati Wednesday.

Steamboat machinery, almost any size in high pressure, can be bought now at Pittsburgh at the lowest price ever known, due to the fact that so many towboats have been put out of commission.

The towboat Sam Brown, en route to Cincinnati with a two of coal, ran aground at the Five-mile Sandbar Thursday, sinking one barge of coal and stuck the balance of her tow. She had twenty-five barges in tow.

The ferryboat City of Jeffersonville was built at the Howard Shipyard in 1891. She is 150 feet long, 34 feet wide and her depth is 6.3. Her gross tonnage is 161 and her horse power is rated at 247. She was built for ferry purposes and requires a crew of five. Her home port is Louisville.

Motorboat owners who travel on the river after sunset, have been warned by government officers to see that their regulations pertaining to water craft are strictly adhered to, especially regarding the signal lights. This is the main source of motorboat fatalities and for the protection of the passengers are out with such owners this law will be rigidly enforced.

Fronton Register: A business man remarked this morning it is no wonder river traffic is getting away from the steamboats and grabbed up by the railroads at a much higher rate, when some of the men depending on the business can't give a civil answer. He said he called up the wharfboss this morning inquiring about the stage, when a gruffly voice said, "Come down and find out."

Officials of the Catherine, a small steamer plying the Ohio river between Cincinnati and Rising Sun, Ind., have complained to Executive Secretary William C. Culkins, of the Chamber of Commerce, at Cincinnati, that their use of the public landing has been interfered with by several steamboat companies. Culkins was told that the Catherine has been hemmed in by other steamers so long on a number of occasions she was unable to depart on schedule. J. E. Eyrieh, Superintendent of Public Property, notified the companies that the use of the public landing must be given the smaller vessels. Competition in the river trade is said to be the cause of the trouble. A. and J. Turner own the Catherine.

VALUABLE MULES.

(Mt. Olivet Tribune-Democrat.)

Speaking of mules, reminds us that our hustling farmer friend, N. R. Cumber, of Thomas, has a pair of 5-year-old bay horse mules that are matches, splendid work animals, and will weigh between 1,200 and 1,400 pounds each. He also has a pair of 2-year-old may mare mules, which match well, are broke and easily handled, and in the condition. They will weigh something like a thousand pounds each. Mr. Cumber has been offered $325 for the horse mules, but they are well worth $500, as are also the mare mules. During the last summer Mr. Cumber harvested forty tons of hay on his farm.

One hundred and eighty hogsheads of tobacco were disposed of by Grant county tobacco dealers last week. The tobacco constituted purchase made at the loose leaf market at Williamstown last season. Most of the tobacco was low grade. The dealers say they made a reasonable profit on the deal.

At the sale of the farm of F. E. Hubbard, of 140 acres, near South Elkhorn, ninety-three acres of land with all improvements, sold to William Davis, of S. W. S. at $137.50 an acre, and the remainder, forty-seven acres, of unimproved land, to Mrs. Ernest Cleveland, at $112.50 an acre.

FOOLED THE DARKEY

Dover Boy Imitated Locomotive Whistle and Came Near Starting Something.

(Dover News.)

Arthur Daniel, the irrepressible and indispensable shell sorter of the Dover Button Factory, has so trained his vocal cords that he is able to imitate, almost to perfection, the whistle of a C. & O. passenger train. And thereby hangs a tale. In which a colored flagman is the goat.

A C. & O. work train crew was making some repairs on the track, just below the button factory, and the foreman had stationed the colored flagman at a point east of the scene of repairs and near the button factory. He had given the flagman positive instructions to flag every west-bound train, to allow nothing to pass him. In addition to the duties of flagging the colored man was required to carry water from the button factory to the camp cars. While at the factory one morning on a water carrying expedition, with a bucket of water in each hand, he was startled by a piercing whistle. Fast Flyer No. 5, direct from New York, and which passes this point at sixty miles an hour, was just about due. The flagman immediately laid visions of a horrible wreck, with blood-besmeared passenger coaches and human heads, trunks, and suitcases in a tangled mass, and the man and screams of the dying, to say nothing of the loss of his own milk ticket. The buckets of water dropped like plummet at his side. He made a wild dash for the tracks, screaming for "gangway" at Daniel, who by that time was in his path. Arriving breathless at the tracks he was bewildered to find the tracks clear and no signs of No. 5.

The whistle was not that of No. 5, but emanated from the delicately formed cords of Arthur Daniel's throat.

There has been some talk of Rev. E. C. Lacy, of the Christian church at Ephing, offering his resignation, as he wishes to go some place where he can preach every Sunday at the church. The people there will all regret to part with Rev. Lacy, as he is liked by all denominations, and has made many friends since he has been there.
